Paradise is Not Heaven

by Fr. John H. Hampsch, CMF

A young priest boasted to his pastor, "I feel that my sermon was really anointed today. I had the people glued to their seats." "Well," said the Monsignor, "I guess that's one way to hold an audience."

One time, as a young priest, I foolishly tried to "hold an audience" by subsuming the persona of Bishop Sheen, impersonating him and quoting him almost verbatim, from a recorded sermon he gave on the gospel about Christ the King, whose great mercy was dispensed from his Calvary throne to the repentant thief traditionally known as Dismas. Theatrically aping Bishop Sheen, I even quoted his description of Christ the King as "our Merciful Monarch," and Dismas as "the thief who stole paradise from the King as he entered his kingdom." In a climactic flourish, I rhapsodized Bishop Sheen's insight dramatically: "If this be the spark, dear God, what be the flame?"

All theatrics aside, the thrust of that epithet was to show God's infinite merciful love conveyed by a single sentence of forgiveness—like a flame or a conflagration hidden in an igniting spark, or an embryonic oak tree in an acorn.

While I was researching material for my book, The Awesome Mercy of God, I learned that God's mercy is mentioned more than 400 times in the Bible, I found the many scripture pericopes on divine mercy to be really awesome; hence the book title. Not just in the Jesus-Dismas event, but in all the Bible's mercy references, I felt a kind of spiritual "awe," as in Luke's classical triad of mercy parables: the lost sheep, the lost coin, and the lost son known as the prodigal son. (By the way, I think the prodigal son parable should be called "the prodigal Father parable," for his prodigal mercy overshadowed the prodigality of the son in spending an inheritance on prostitutes and a life of debauchery.)

The Jesus-Dismas dialog lends itself to a seldom explored aspect of theology, or, more specifically, soteriology, since it unearths a rarely viewed aspect of God's redemptive mercy. The science of soteriology probes the two-sided coin of redemption-salvation. Redemption is God's action of giving ("redemptio means payment). Salvation is the human act of receiving the payed-for gift of heavenly reward, conditioned, of course, on repentance).

Christ as King often spoke of heaven as the kingdom of heaven, but when Dismas asks to be remembered in Christ's kingdom, Jesus doesn't speak of heaven but only "paradise," which was not heaven. Why? Because heaven is centralized on the direct "face-to-face beatific vision" of God, mentioned in 1 Cor. 13. In paradise God was known only obscurely, as in our present earthly state, that is—to use Paul's words—"as in a mirror." (Remember, ancient mirrors consisted only of polished metal, which of course reflected images obscurely.) Jesus words, "this day with me in paradise" could not have referred to heaven, for Jesus would not arrive there until his ascension, 40 days later, when heaven would be opened to all worthy pre-Christian souls, ransomed by Jesus' death. In Hebrews 9 it says that Jesus, the mediator of the new covenant, died to remit the sins of those under the old covenant. Those "old covenant sinners" resided in a most blissful state which Paul himself experienced (2 Cor. 12), when he was "caught up into paradise." In Luke 16 Jesus himself refers to this "paradise," this abode of blessedness, as the "side of Abraham"—the premiere saint of God's people, who awaited with him for their future vindication. This paradise, often referred to as the "limbo of the patriarchs," was an "abode of the righteous"; it provided limited but blissful to all the volunteers and to all those who fasted and prayed for spiritual victories and breakthroughs at the recent SCRC Catholic Renewal Convention.

God's grace was very evident throughout the entire three days. The Holy Spirit was present in a number of astonishing signs and wonders. We humbly request that you continue to surround with your prayers and sacrifices the numerous outreaches of the SCRC ministry. God Bless You!

2019 SCRC Convention Prophecies

"My people, lift up your hearts to Me. Turn your face to Me and I will turn My face to you. For I love you. You are My people. You are mine. I am your God. I am your Savior. There is no one other. There is no one else who can give you life. Put all your love in Me. Put all your trust in Me. Put all your hope in Me. And, follow Me."

"My people, I have set the earth ablaze and on fire with My Spirit. I have come to set the captives free, to heal the sick, to bring hope to the hopeless. I have come because I love you. You are dear to My heart and I will love you from everlasting to everlasting."

"My people, It is I. I am here amongst

you. I am the God who loves you. I am the God who cares for you. I am the God who is faithful to you. I am here to let you know that I am still in control of the world. The world is in darkness but I still reign. I still hold the world in the palm of My hand. I am still the hope of the world, no one else. It is I, the hope of the world. And, I care for you. Continue to love one-another. Continue to live in peace and harmony with one another and there will be peace on the earth. I love you My Children."

"My beloved, you are here with a heavy heart. I know all your burdens. Be at peace. I am with you. The mountain you are facing down will cast out into the sea. Behind the dark clouds that you see is My bright light. The river blocking your way will divide to clear your path. The storm blowing in you will calm down. The rocky road you are walking will smooth out. Come as you are and be still in My presence. I have many things in store for you. Be at peace, my beloved."

"My beloved children, what great joy it brings My heart to see you praise and worship My son Jesus. Know that your Mother Mary is with you as all the saints and angels are with you also."

My people, I set you free that your lives may shine with My glory. I set you free so that your lives may shine with My love. I call on you to be the face of Jesus for the world, to be My people of joy, of peace and of love for the world."

"Beloved, stand firm in your faith so that My divine light may shine through you to the world to give hope. Pray fervently, pray for one another, for your families and for the world. Then, sing praises, sing praises of joy and praises of thanksgiving and I will dance and celebrate with you."

fulfillment for the heaven-bound.

Jesus descended before he ascended; the classic Apostles' Creed says that "he descended into "hell"—that is, Hades, the abode of the dead—certainly not the hell of the damned (Tartaros). This "non-heaven" "hell" called paradise had no resemblance to the infernal hell, except for the souls' non-access to heaven (temporarily), and the absence of the direct vision of God (temporarily). St. Thomas, in his Catena Aurea, says that Christ's separated soul and entombed body both encased his divinity, yet in neither one could heaven's Beatific Vision be seen, even in any transfiguration. Hence, Dismas did not directly see Christ's divinity in paradise, but he did encounter the created human soul of Christ, visiting there between Good Friday and Easter Sunday.

Because souls in paradise lacked complete fulfillment, the first pope (1Peter 3:19) refers to this place as the "prison" into which Jesus' "spirit" descended (that is, his human soul, separated by death from his entombed body). In this excursion Jesus evangelized its denizens, for Hebrews 2:3 reminds us that they had not been evangelized. Peter then describes Jesus' mission as teaching these souls about salvation, and about baptism as the normative means of implementing it. That was divine mercy by enlightenment!

Thus, this gospel displays a trilogy of episodes of mercy exercised by Christ the King—the Merciful Monarch: his mercy extended to the living, to the dying and even to the dead. First, he forgave the living—the brutal soldiers and "rulers" who challenged his royal kingship, publicly emblazoned on his bloody throne, Rex Judeorum. Second, he forgave the dying Dismas, with a promise of bliss in paradise; and third, mercy to the dead in paradise, exciting their hope of being "transferred to the kingdom of Gods son" (Col. 1:13) at his Ascension. In the psalmist's words, "He leads forth the prisoners with singing" (Ps. 68:6).

On his blood-splattered throne, Jesus, by his sacred Passion became King of Martyrs. Mary by her com-passion became Queen of Martyrs, as St. Alphonsus reminds us. By way of parallel, our Merciful King promises to be with us, like Dismas "in his kingdom" through our own daily passion of suffering and our compassion for others. How? "Take up your cross daily and follow me."

Let us foster the hope articulated in a liturgical post-Communion prayer: that we may share in the glory of Christ our merciful King in his heavenly kingdom. The words of the saintly Oscar Romero say it all: "Jesus' kingship is not a despotic regime, but a regime of merciful love."
